April 25, 2017/ Ref: 333/2017
toufic.labbara@lafargeholcim.com

Dear Stakeholder,
Holcim (Liban) SAL.

Reference to the announcement issued by LafargeHolcim, on Monday, April 24 about the conclusion of the independent investigation into the Syria review and the resignation of Group CEO, Eric Olsen, we would like to clarify the following:

Syria Review

- The Board concluded the independent investigation and confirmed that a number of measures taken to continue safe operations at the Syrian plant were unacceptable, and significant errors of judgment were made that contravened the applicable code of conduct.
- The Board has concluded that Eric Olsen was not responsible for, nor thought to be aware of, any wrongdoings that have been identified as part of its review.
- The Board confirms the remedial measures announced on March 2, 2017.

Resignation of Eric Olsen

- The Board has accepted the resignation of Eric Olsen. He will leave on 15 July 2017, two years after taking up the CEO role and assuming responsibility for successfully implementing the merger.

Position of Holcim Lebanon

- Holcim Lebanon is committed to open and transparent communication with all its stakeholders.
- We are fully committed to our Code of Conduct, which applies to all of us, no matter the operational challenges.
- In 2013 and 2014, specifically during the times of dealings with armed groups and sanctioned parties in Syria , Lafarge Syria and Holcim Lebanon were business rivalries . Hence, no information were shared between the companies.
- Following the merger between Lafarge and Holcim in 2015, Lafarge Cement Syria and Holcim (Liban) s.a.l. remained two different legal entities. As such, activities of both companies were, and still are, completely independent from each other.
- The findings of the investigations do not affect our operations in Lebanon, nor our good and transparent relations with our stakeholders.

Should you have any concerns or require further clarifications, it is my pleasure to personally discuss the matter with you.

Yours sincerely,

Toufic Tabbara
Holcim (Liban) s.a.l.
CEO

LafargeHolcim concludes independent investigation into legacy Syria operations and issues summary of investigation findings

April 24, 2017

As previously communicated, managers of legacy Lafarge operations were alleged to have had dealings with certain armed groups and sanctioned parties at Lafarge's plant in Syria between 2013 and the evacuation of the plant in September 2014. In response to these allegations, the Board of Directors of LafargeHolcim commissioned an internal investigation supported by independent external counsel with substantial experience in complex cross-border investigations. The Board has taken note that as part of the internal investigation and given his current role as CEO of LafargeHolcim, the role and potential implication of Eric Olsen has been a point of attention. Following an in-depth review, the Board has concluded that Eric Olsen was not responsible for, nor thought to be aware of, any wrongdoings that have been identified as part of this review. The Board has now concluded the review and mandated Eric Olsen and his executive management team to implement remedial measures.

Overview of the Independent Investigation Process

Based on its preliminary review of the reports in the media and assessment that they contained potentially credible information, LafargeHolcim immediately sought advice from outside counsel and instructed that an independent investigation be conducted by outside counsel and forensic accountants, under the direction and supervision of the Finance and Audit Committee (FAC). The process of the investigation adhered closely to generally accepted investigatory standards, including as to scoping, rigor, and independence.

The process included, among other things, extensive procedures to preserve documents, identification of personnel involved, in-depth review of electronic data and substantive interviews of company employees and executives, including senior managers responsible for Syrian operations.

Legacy Lafarge's operations in Syria

The activities in Syria between 2011 and 2014 took place during a time of great volatility and chaos in a country increasingly consumed by what became outright civil war, which continues to this day.

Lafarge built a cement plant in Syria which required almost 3 years to build at a cost of approximately $680 mil/ion. It started production in May, 2010 and operated much of the time at a loss. Nevertheless, it was one of the only sources of meaningful employment for the surrounding communities and provided cement for infrastructure, businesses, roads and the like for various communities throughout Syria.

In March 2011, the first wave of political unrest began in Syria. What were initially peaceful protests soon turned violent. By the end of 2011, employees at the Syrian plant witnessed a significant deterioration in the security situation.

In June 2012, on account of the deteriorating political situation, expatriate employees were evacuated from Syria. Non-Syrian executives of the Syrian company relocated to Cairo and oversaw operations at the Syrian plant remotely. Over the next two years, the plant continued to operate whenever it had sufficient resources and personnel to do so. Eventually, in mid-September 2014, the plant was evacuated.

Findings of the Investigation

The deterioration of the political situation in Syria posed unprecedented challenges to the operations of Lafarge Cement Syria ("LCS"). LCS and its parent company (then, Lafarge SA) took a number of steps to address these concerns, including bringing in additional security personnel and scheduling regular calls between executives of the Syrian company and their managers outside Syria to monitor the situation. In addition, a crisis group designed to identify certain security-related trigger events in Syria that would initiate the process of evacuating expatriate employees from Syria was established and met regularly in Paris until November 2012.

The safety and security of LCS employees was of primary concern.

As the situation in Syria deteriorated in late 2011, the plant became increasingly subject to disruption by local armed groups. These groups periodically interfered with employee transportation to and from the plant, restricted access to necessary supplies, and harassed customers. To deal with these problems, LCS used intermediaries to avoid direct contact with these armed groups as there was concern that direct contact would create additional risk vis-a-vis the Syrian government or other armed groups.

Very simply, chaos reigned and it was the task of local management to ensure that the intermediaries did whatever was necessary to secure its supply chain and the free movement of its employees. As a result, notwithstanding any reservations they had regarding these intermediaries, LCS made and continued to make payments to such intermediaries in furtherance of operations. Having identified a mechanism for dealing with the challenges they faced, these methods were applied without regard to the identity of the groups involved.

Beginning in early 2013, terrorist groups designated by the US and the EU were expanding into the area, along with other non-designated militant groups. It was in this chaotic environment that LCS operated and tried to keep its doors open. LCS management believed it was serving the best interests of the company and its employees who depended on LCS salaries for their livelihood.

LCS management kept Lafarge SA well-informed of developments and security-related concerns through their appointed chain of authority.

Those responsible for the Syria operations appear to have acted in a manner they thought was in the best interests of the company and its employees and, based on their communication and consultation along that same chain, in the belief that their efforts were fully understood, supported, and appreciated by their senior management. In hindsight any misdeeds may seem clear. However the combination of the war zone chaos and the "can-do" approach to maintain operations in these circumstances may have caused those involved to seriously misjudge the situation and to neglect to focus sufficiently on the legal and reputational implications of their conduct.

Remedial Measures

All necessary steps were undertaken to investigate the facts around the dealings of LCS with the various factions in Syria.

The conduct summarized above was inconsistent with Lafarge's policies. Its compliance program as it existed at the time failed to prevent these breaches. Contributing factors included for instance insufficient independence of the Internal Control function from line operations, circumvention of the internal certification procedures and the inability to conduct a field audit due to the security situation.

There have been significant changes and developments made to the compliance program and infrastructure since the time of the alleged misconduct.

The weaknesses in the compliance program and controls that were identified in the investigation have been assessed against LafargeHolcim's current compliance program to ensure that they are now corrected:

- a) Improper payments related to LCS's security and supply chain;
- b) Failure of line management to object to the conduct or the payments referenced above, notwithstanding red flags;
- c) Inadequate controls over individual expenses, discounts, and financial disbursements from LCS;
- d) Inadequate review and oversight of third parties and joint venture partners engaged by LCS; and
- e) Failure to detect and properly escalate improper payments made, and improperly recorded, in company accounts, or identify the same through group audit.

To the extent not already adequately addressed under the current compliance program, LafargeHolcim is examining its policies, protocols, and related financial controls to ensure that misconduct identified can be better detected and/or prevented all together. These measures include the following:

- a) Improved Compliance Communications;
- b) Comprehensive Sanctions Policies and Procedures;
- c) Adoption Country-Specific Risk Assessments;
- d) Enhanced Restricted Party Screening;
- e) Establishment of the Ethics, Integrity, and Risk Committee.

The Board has instructed Eric Olsen and his executive management team to vigorously implement these actions, which are designed to further strengthen and resource a state-of-the-art compliance organization and processes reflecting the best practices. The Board has further instructed that there can be no compromise with compliance nor with adherence to the standards reflected in the LafargeHolcim Code of Conduct without regard to operational challenges.

In order to ensure that these directives and the policies of the company are followed in letter and spirit, the Board approved the creation of a new Ethics, Integrity & Risk committee, supervised by a member of the Executive Committee. This Committee brings together compliance, internal controls, and risk management expertise to provide a holistic and coordinated approach to LafargeHolcim compliance efforts. Revisions to the compliance structure generally are also underway but will preserve the direct access for the head of compliance to the FAC and CEO as is also currently the case for the head of internal audit.

Pursuant to LafargeHolcim's internal standards, any decisions regarding disciplinary actions for the relevant employees will be carried out after providing the employees with an opportunity to be heard and upon consideration of the factors specified in LafargeHolcim Group Compliance Committee charter.

In connection with the conduct summarized above, criminal complaints are reported to have been filed in France. Such proceedings are conducted under a rule of secrecy and neither Lafarge SA nor any of its affiliates have been made a party to any of them. In light of the proceedings, the company will not comment further on the findings or individual conduct. The company remains open to provide the authorities with any lawful assistance in relation to their respective proceedings.

Legacy Lafarge operations in Syria operated at a loss during the time period in question and represented less than 1% of the Group's sales at the time the plant was evacuated.

LafargeHolcim: Board of Directors concludes Syria Review and confirms remedial measures

On 2 March 2017 LafargeHolcim communicated the initial findings of an independent internal investigation, commissioned by the Board of Directors, into allegations concerning the Lafarge plant in Syria: specifically that company personnel had engaged in dealings with armed groups and sanctioned parties during 2013 until the plant closed in September 2014. The internal investigation was carried out by independent external counsel with substantial experience in complex cross-border investigations.

The Board has now concluded the independent investigation and confirmed that a number of measures taken to continue safe operations at the Syrian plant were unacceptable, and significant errors of judgment were made that contravened the applicable code of conduct. The findings also confirm that, although these measures were instigated by local and regional management, selected members of Group management were aware of circumstances indicating that violations of Lafarge's established standards of business conduct had taken place.

As part of the internal investigation and given his current role as CEO of LafargeHolcim, the role and potential implication of Eric Olsen has been a point of attention. Following an in-depth review, the Board has concluded that Eric Olsen was not responsible for, nor thought to be aware of, any wrongdoings that have been identified as part of its review. In light of current legal proceedings in France, the company will not comment further on the findings or individual conduct.

The Board confirms the remedial measures announced on 2 March 2017, on the basis of the earlier findings including: the adoption of a more rigorous risk assessment process focusing on high risk third parties; introduction of a restricted party screening program and a new sanctions and export control program; as well as continuation of other efforts from an external benchmarking exercise. Having now concluded the review, the Board has mandated Eric Olsen and his executive management team to implement these remedial measures.

The previously announced Ethics, Integrity & Risk Committee will be responsible for overseeing the rigorous implementation which will strengthen and enhance Group-wide compliance. The committee is co-chaired by the Executive Committee member responsible for Organization and Human Resources and the Chief Legal and Compliance Officer, and reports to the Finance and Audit Committee of the Board of Directors.

Media Release

Beat Hess, Chairman of the Board of LafargeHolcim said: "Although I appreciate that those responsible for the Syrian operations appear to have acted in a manner they believed was in the best interests of the company and its employees, there can be no compromise when it comes to compliance rules and adherence to the standards set out in the company's code of conduct, no matter what the operational challenges are. We are absolutely committed to ensuring that events like those that occurred in Syria must never happen again at LafargeHolcim."

Based on the updated information available today, there remains no indication that the reported allegations are likely to have an adverse financial impact that is material to the Group.

About LafargeHolcim in Syria

Due to the nature of cement and its manufacture, cement plants are located in or near the markets they serve. In some locations, this presents distinct challenges. Syria is one such place. Lafarge's cement plant in Syria took almost 3 years to build at a cost of approximately $680 million. It started production in May 2010 and was a source of meaningful employment for the surrounding communities, as well as providing cement for homes, businesses, roads and other infrastructure for various communities throughout Syria. Almost from its opening, the political situation in Syria deteriorated rapidly, posing very difficult challenges for the security and operation of the plant and its employees. Such challenges included disruption of the supplies needed to operate the plant, difficulties with product distribution and threats to the safety of employees. Different armed political factions controlled or sought to control the areas around the plant at different times. Conditions around the plant became increasingly difficult in 2014 resulting in the evacuation of the plant in September 2014. The Group has not attempted to operate on site since that time.

Holcim and Lafarge announce a list of proposed asset disposals as part of their planned merger

Lafarge and Holcim have taken a further step towards their planned merger of equals to create LafargeHolcim, the most advanced and innovative group in the building materials industry.

A Divestment Committee was set up by both companies, following the announcement of the planned merger on April 7, with the aim of taking forward the divestment process. It has drawn up a list of proposed asset disposals, to anticipate potential competition authorities' requirements.

Today's announcement represents a major part of the total assets that the two companies aim to divest.

The two companies are proposing the following disposals:

Europe

- Austria: Lafarge's Mannersdorf cement plant
- France: Holcim's assets in metropolitan France, except for its Altkirch cement plant and aggregates and readymix sites in the Haut-Rhin market; Lafarge's assets on Reunion island, except for its shareholding in Ciments de Bourbon
- Germany: Lafarge's assets
- Hungary: Holcim's operating assets
- Romania: Lafarge's assets
- Serbia: Holcim's assets
- the UK: Lafarge Tarmac assets with the possible exception of one cement plant

The future LafargeHolcim group will have a significant and balanced industrial base in Europe - around 20% of its revenues - within its overall global footprint, enabling it to take advantage of the European economic recovery.

Other countries

- Canada: Holcim's assets
- Mauritius: Holcim's assets
- The Philippines: the associated companies of Lafarge and Holcim (Lafarge Republic Inc. – LRI and Holcim Philippines Inc.) are exploring the combination of their businesses other than LRI's Bulacan, Norzagaray, and Iligan plants which are considered to be divested as part of such combination.
- Brazil: Holcim and Lafarge will file soon with the Brazilian regulator, CADE, and propose a comprehensive and high quality package of divestments.

Both companies will continue to consider whether divestments would be necessary where there might be overlaps or depending on regulatory requirements.

These proposed divestments are subject to review and further discussions with the regulatory authorities and to the agreement of our business partners when relevant.

The divestment process will be carried out in the framework of the relevant social processes and ongoing dialogue with the employee representatives' bodies and will be conducted in parallel to discussions with the competition authorities and potential buyers. The divestment process will be completed subject to the closing of the merger between Holcim and Lafarge.

This announcement follows the formal signing of the combination agreement, marking the conclusion of the merger terms announced on April 7, 2014. The combination remains conditional upon the required regulatory and other customary consultations and approvals.

As announced, the closing of the planned merger is expected in H1 2015, aiming to create the most balanced and diversified portfolio in the industry, operating in 90 countries and creating superior value for its stakeholders.
